Description: Recorded May 5 1988 at the Effenaar, Eindhoven, at the end of a long European tour promoting The Tenement Year. By this point in the tour the set had evolved into fluid and often seamless transitions. Arrangements were loose and often improvisational. The source is a metal oxide band cassette recorded at the mix desk. The first side runs out in the 1st chorus of "We Have The Technology" but our soundman was very quick on the changeover and there's only a couple measures missing, necessitating a cheap and cheerful tape edit. This is essentially the entire show as it went down with the exception of a false start to "The Hollow Earth" and the subsequent "time splicing" stage routine used to cover over such train wrecks. And speaking of train wrecks, the last encore, "Say Goodbye," sports a doozie of one in the last verse. However the cassette used to record the show had been previously used to record a show at Bogart's, Cincinnati, 10/25/87, and sitting there at the end of the Effenaar recording was "Say Goodbye" so it has been added as a bonus track just to show we were capable of playing the thing. Soundman was Joachim Schweiger, who was the regular Ubu soundman for most of this era.
