Description: The working title for the next Pere Ubu album is "Lady From Shanghai." The initial aim for the project is to "fix" dance, as "Long Live Pere Ubu!" was conceived as a project to "fix" theater. People ask, Well, what kind of dance are you talking about: classical, ballet, pop, Broadway? The answer is, All of it. Dance encourages the body to move without permission. That's a fundamental flaw. It must be solved. These songs are somewhere between demos and works-in-progress. They are far from completed. They are at the place where the ideas are coalescing. They will continue to evolve as instruments, parts and ideas are added and fleshed out. The titles are working titles and so they may or may not change. People ask, How do you write songs? Here is a glimpse at one methodology.

It's highly unlikely that "Thanks" will appear in this form. David is in the process of grooming Steve Mehlman to be his replacement as Ubu's singer. This, however, is one of those studio larks that rarely see the light of day.

Description: This is the fourth installment of the works-in-progress for the next Pere Ubu album, "Lady From Shanghai." It is the latest update of the entire set of songs as of this summer. Some of them are nearly completed as far as tracking goes. A couple are still in the embryonic stage. None of them are anywhere close to a final mix. The final vocals of "Thanks" are yet to be written/recorded. This may be the last release of the works-in-progress.

Previous demo releases are: First Set, Demos #2, and Demos #3.

Starting with this release a pdf of liner notes will be included in the zipped download file along with the song files.
